

I do not want banks or any other commerical self serving business to have access to my private phone number. The banks have no more right to disturb my privacy than do insurance companies, merchandisers, charities or even religious organizations directing their appeals to my private home phone seeking donations, sales or survey information for their own commercial needs. I want none of these, regardless of past contacts, associations or casual contacts made by them without my request or involvement. My privacy supercedes their need to solicit my business or interfere with my privacy in my own home. Thank you for listening! Richard W. Hoekstra
